CodeSmith is designed to be easily extendable. It is 100% object oriented and Object-based, so you can pick and choose as much or as little code as you want. You create a.cs file and "configure" it by adding or editing the parts that you want to customize. You can add new global objects, properties and methods. You can customize the final output of your code as well as configure the way the template behaves. CodeSmith has sophisticated built-in text processing capabilities that allow you to customize and create your own custom type of input and/or output files. You configure CodeSmith by setting configuration properties which can be derived from values supplied by input/output files. Properties of CodeSmith take precedence over values in input files and can override any values from output files. The output file is also an input file, so every.cs output file can also be an.asp input file. You simply change the file extension from.cs to.asp and it becomes a full working asp web application, with all of the configuration options you created to control the template.

Q: LINQ to Entities does not recognize the method 'Int32 EntitySet.Contains(Int32)' method, and this method cannot be translated into a store expression I'm using Linq-to-Entities on a MVC4 application running on.NET 4.5 and am running into this error: The method 'Int32 EntitySet.Contains(Int32)' is not supported The error is being thrown on: return db.Lines.Where(l => l.Id == lineId &&!l.LangIds.Contains(currentLangId)) I understand what the error is telling me, I don't know how to fix it. The LINQ is being generated by the Entity Framework with the Data Model. Any tips? A: I think it has to do with the fact that you are using Entity Framework and Linq to Entities. Lets say you have a class called Line: class Line { public int Id { get; set; } public List LangIds { get; set; } } And this class is being mapped in a dbcontext that is part of an entity framework model. Then the code should CodeSmith is a schema designer and generator. It generates code templates for ASP.NET or any other XML-based XML Markup Language used to represent Schemas. It can also generate HTML or any other kind of code you like to use to display the generated Scheme. The code is simple and intuitive, it uses a T4 template language, and generates a designer and a compiler to access it.

CodeSmith has an integrated schema designer, to create schemas or database schemas. It can also generate schemas in other language than its default: XML, HTML, JavaScript, C# or VB.NET. It can also display the generated code.

MSDN: Template-based Syntax A: The code has been slowly evolving away from the 'ASP.NET' template scheme to a more 'generic' template scheme. In addition, you could also have a look at the code itself: Hope this helps!

Counterfeit medicines are a problem everywhere, from the retail level to the hospital, but some sub-Saharan countries are particularly vulnerable to the problem. Pharmacy assistant Lauren Alvarado at a hospital in Lusaka, Zambia, where poor hygiene causes an outbreak of sepsis in a newborn. Credit: James McCarthy/IPS. Lusaka, Zambia -- Opale Chitepo walks in and out of a neonatal ward at a hospital in the Zambian capital. She is a pharmacist but also a mother, and she's also wearing an apron. Here she is in full routine, as she transports newborns to a motor pool from an incubator where she and other neonatal staff have been treating an outbreak of sepsis caused by poor hygiene. One of the patients at the centre of the outbreak, a newborn, has succumbed to the infection. "They brought me here a couple of days before because I could do nothing to help," Chitepo said, referring to a fellow nurse and her colleague who attended to her also worked in the ward and have since fallen sick. "I didn't feel like they would recover. But I was optimistic," said Chitepo, who aa67ecbc25

Q: Fill up empty data into pandas dataframe I want to read a csv file into a pandas dataframe. The data are filled with NA for each missing column. In fact, it is not necessary to fill the empty data with NA, in fact I would have preferred simply an empty column. The question is how to accomplish this, without a for loop.

```
import pandas as pd
df = pd.read_csv('data.csv')
df.fillna('', inplace=True)
print df.head()
```

The result is:

0	1	2	3	4	5	\	0	NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN
NaN	NaN	1	NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN	2	NaN	NaN	NaN
NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN	NaN	6	7	8	9	10	11

More detailed info about this on Alternately, you could use a web based tool. Such as A: There's a free SQL Server Management Studio tool called SQL Sniffer.
