The new immersive technology is a result of the partnership between Konami and EA Sports, which they explained further in a statement. "With the HyperMotion technology, we are able to produce realistic player movements based on actual ball data and allow the player to feel like a real player," said Anthony Pasquale, executive producer and design director at EA. "The new physicality and momentum of the game will surprise and entertain the player." The technology is designed to look more realistic and capture greater accuracy than past-generation FIFA titles. Players can control the angle and intensity of the simulation, with improvements made on area of impact recognition, ball collision and more. In addition, the suit-based motion capture is redesigned to enable the players to play naturally within the system. The players are able to rotate their body freely within the suit, allowing them to experience the game in the way they would play it in real life. "This technology puts an emphasis on accurate and responsive control," said Christoph Hartmann, senior producer at EA Sports. "It will allow you to control your players in a way that you have only seen in the past in other sports games - but now you can feel the ball." The new gameplay will affect offensive and defensive play. Goalkeepers will be able to easily handle the ball with no head-first dives, for example. Also new in FIFA 22 are the "Triple Threat" and "Fresco" play styles, which allow players to select from three attacking and defensive play styles. These play styles are inspired by "Hybrid," a play style unique to real-life football, which allows for various transitions from offense to defense and vice versa. Four new player ratings - "Pro," "Pro 90," "AM," and "AM 90" - have been added to the game, with the new ratings allowing for the most realistic representation of the professional player, while still maintaining the accessibility of the game. Players will be able to create 11 players, with 25 kits, and up to 45 stadiums. FIFA 22 also adds the "Matchday Manager," a feature that lets users build their ideal team and customize their coaching and training methods. The online Open Beta will begin this weekend, and features a first-ever matchday manager mode with "Multiple Coach System," in which users can switch to all 11 of their players' av

FIFA is a soccer video game series developed and published by Electronic Arts. The series includes two main games, FIFA 19 and FIFA 20, one online Pass and User Interface service FIFA Mobile, and one yearly FIFA Calendar Contest and GAMESA. FIFA is the world's leading sports game franchise and the best-selling franchise of all time. Who created FIFA? FIFA was originally developed by John McTiernan and Michael Minkler. In September 1992, McTiernan and his partner John Tobias got to work on what was ultimately to become the first FIFA. They created the game out of a hope to help athletes get paid the way they were being paid in other sports. That idea gave birth to the FUT series, which is Football United Teams in the United States and Football StarTeams in Europe. In 1993, EA bought the franchise and renamed it EA Sports before launching it as a franchise in August 1994. What happened to the first FUT? In 1997, EA bought the rights to publish Football Stars franchise and renamed it to FUT. However, the original FUT was never released for a reason that remains unclear. Fans still ask why the first FUT was never released while the rest of the series is heavily based on it. How FIFA became the biggest sports video game series in the world? In the early 90s, EA began integrating the player into games. It released Madden, which made EA the world's biggest sports game franchise right after the original FUT. FIFA players became the largest player base when EA integrated the game with the FUT online soccer service. The online service was released in August 1996. The following year, FIFA became the best-selling video game franchise with sales of over 4.7 million units. Who is in the running for the FIFA 20 cover? The FIFA 20 cover is currently in the hands of Cristiano Ronaldo, who has previously been chosen for the cover. However, fans still wonder who the best player on Earth could be for a FIFA cover. Mario Balotelli, Alessandro del Piero, Arjen Robben, Diego Costa, Franck Ribéry, Neymar, Antoine Griezmann, Lionel Messi, Harry Kane, and Zlatan Ibrahimovic are among the players who have been in the running for the cover. What is FIFA Ultimate Team? FIFA Ultimate Team is an online service in bc9d6d6daa
