The "License Agreement" pop-up window should have prompted you to accept by clicking the "Accept" button. A: A possible reason is because you're using IE? I'm not sure if it's just IE, or other browsers as well. Try downloading and running this. If that works, then you have an IE thing going on. Q: how to detect wcf duplex service endpoint context is in client machine I have a duplex WCF service, which is running inside ASP.NET 3.5 application. Before starting the service I check the host machine url, to know the endpoint context is not in IIS. When the service started, it means the machine host running ASP.NET 4.0/4.5. How do I check if the endpoint context is for ASP.NET application and not for IIS(server)? A: Use System.Servi
